MEMORANDUM FOR: Director, FBIS

THROUGH : Chief, Operations Group

SUBJECT : Monthly Report--Paraguay Bureau--November 1985

I. GENERAL

1. Clyde D. Taylor, newly appointed U.S. Ambassador to Paraguay, arrived in Asuncion on the 5th. A career member of the Senior Foreign Service, he had been a deputy assistant secretary of state in the Bureau of International Narcotic Matters since November 1980. The next several days after his arrival were dominated by protocolary functions such as meetings and receptions for both the official Paraguayan community and the American and local members of the mission. On the 8th, the bureau chief briefed the Ambassador on the bureau's operations, concerns, and plans. Ambassador Taylor presented his credentials on the 12th.

2. Ambassador Taylor decided on the 26th that the location for the bureau's Associate ROSET antenna will be near the annex/bureau building -- a long-sought-after bureau goal. This is the optimum location for the antenna, instead of the alternate site some 400 meters away from the bureau at the rear of the Embassy compound near the Marine House. Remodeling to accommodate ROSET has begun. The construction/installation work is tentatively set to begin near the end of January for completion possibly in February. Not wasting a moment, the Embassy already has planted a winding row of baby bushes, which will--if nature cooperates--after a few months help to mask the nakedness of the antenna and its pedestal from the driveway that winds through the compound.

II. OPERATIONS

A. Monitorial/Editorial

1. Argentine coverage was highlighted by the 3 November congressional elections in Argentina, which took place as scheduled despite scattered clashes between supporters of various political parties and factions of parties. The elections resulted in a significant victory for the ruling Radical Civic Union Party of President Raul Alfonsin, which increased its legislative majority over the Justicialist (Peronist) Party. Several prominent, long-time Justicialist deputies lost their seats. Argentines were jubilant over passage on the 27th of a UN resolution introduced by Brazil, which urged Argentina and the UK to begin negotiations to solve the Falklands (Malvinas) issue. Before the vote, Foreign Minister Caputo had stressed that once negotiations began, everything would be discussed and nothing would be excluded. To Argentines, this means that the issue of sovereignty over the islands must be included in any negotiations. On the 29th, Alfonsin and Brazilian President Jose Sarney dedicated a new bridge over the Yguazu River on the Argentine-Brazilian border. Both leaders spoke and the bureau filed a 4-take editorial report on the event.

2. Terrorist attacks in Chile intensified to coincide with a 2-day protest on the 5th and 6th against the imprisonment of union leader Rodolfo Seguel and five colleagues (Seguel and two other leaders were released on the 27th on a court order.) Bombings occurred in Santiago and Valparaiso, five people were killed, and the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front claimed responsibility for blacking out Santiago and a large section of central Chile on the 5th. On the 7th, General Cesar Raul Benavides, Army representative on the Government Junta, was replaced by General Julio Canessa Robert. A military court acquitted former General Manuel Contreras on the 14th on charges of participating in the 1976 murder in Washington of former Chilean Foreign Minister Orlando Letelier. On the 21st, the Democratic Alliance (AD), after wrangling with the government to obtain a permit, held a "Chile Demands Democracy" rally, attended by almost 1 million people according to the AD and by only 100,000 according to government security forces. It was addressed by AD leader Gabriel Valdes. It is significant that the Pinochet government allowed a live broadcast of Valdes' speech, which the bureau texted.

3. On the 15th, municipal elections were held in Brazil without serious incident. The Brazilian Democratic Mobilization Party, which is the major element in the coalition that supports President Jose Sarney, won in 127 municipal districts, including 19 state capitals, confirming itself as the country's major political force. In a victory for rightists, however, former President Janio Quadros was elected mayor of Sao Paulo and leftist candidates of the Democratic Workers Party won in Rio de Janeiro and Porto Alegre.

B. Cruising

The cruiser surveyed the Moscow fall-winter secondary frequency adjustments 3-15 November.

C. Technical

A complete preventive maintenance was performed at the bureau's remote site. A new rack-mounted blower was installed at the remote site on the microwave rack.
